RE: Lapse Plan for Agency Operations in the Absence of Appropriations

This memorandum establishes a contingency plan that will become operational in the event of a lapse in appropriations to fund current activities of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS). The plan provides for an orderly suspension of most agency operations and continuation of limited essential functions.

Summary of Agency Functions

FMCS is an independent executive branch agency whose primary mission is to assist parties in labor disputes in industries affecting commerce, to settle such disputes through conciliation and mediation, and thus to avoid or minimize the disruptive effects of strikes and/or lockouts. FMCS also provides alternative dispute resolution services and establishes collaborative labor-management programs. FMCS provides its services variously to the private and public sectors, including federal agencies and state and local governments.

FMCS's international work in collaboration with the U.S. Department of State and the U.S. Department of Labor includes assisting other nations and foreign organizations with issues relating to effective labor relations systems. The agency also maintains and provides aggrieved parties with rosters of arbitrators.

FMCS conducts its core program operations at its Washington, DC, headquarters and in six regions across the country.

Except as described in this plan, all agency offices will close, and core operations will cease upon a lapse in appropriations. The following offices support FMCS's core program areas and services:

- Office of the Director
- Headquarters
- Field Operations
- Policy and Strategy

Legal Standards Applicable to Determinations Under the Contingency Plan

The United States Constitution provides, "No money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by Law[.]" U.S. Const. art 1, § 9, cl. 7. The Antideficiency Act (the Act) prohibits officers and employees of the Federal government from incurring obligations in advance of appropriations except where such obligations are authorized by law. 31 U.S.C. § 1341 (a)(1)(B). The Act further prohibits officers and employees of the Federal government from employing personal services exceeding those authorized by law except for emergencies involving the safety of human life or the protection of property. Such emergencies do not include ongoing regular functions of government, the suspension of which would not imminently threaten the safety of human life or the protection of property. 31 U.S.C. § 1342.

The Attorney General has determined that the exception for emergencies under the Antideficiency Act is narrow and must be applied only where there is: 1) a reasonable and articulable connection between the function to be performed and the safety of human life or the protection of property; and 2) some reasonable likelihood that the safety of human life or the protection of property would be compromised in some significant degree by delay in the performance of the function in question. Accordingly, "the emergencies exception applies only to cases of threat to human life or property where the threat can be reasonably said to be [sic] near at hand and demanding of immediate response." Memorandum for Alice Rivlin, Director, Office of Management and Budget, August 16, 1995.

The Attorney General has also opined that agencies are by necessary implication authorized to incur those minimal obligations necessary for the orderly termination of functions that may not continue during a period of lapsed appropriations. See "Applicability of the Antideficiency Act Upon a Lapse in an Agency's Appropriations," 4A Op. O.L.C. 16 (1980); "Authority for the Continuance of Government Functions During a Temporary Lapse in Appropriations," 5 Op. (1981). The Attorney General has further noted that, with respect to any short lapse in appropriations, it is appropriate for an agency to assume in its analysis of emergencies that the private economy will continue operating during the lapse. Memorandum for Alice Rivlin, ibid.

Agency Functions that Will Continue During a Lapse in Funding as Excepted Activities

FMCS will continue to provide its services when: 1) the agency head determines that FMCS services are necessary to protect life or property; and 2) such threat to life or property is imminent and an immediate response is necessary to avoid or minimize the disruptive effects of a work stoppage, strike, lockout, or similar event. The agency head will determine the need for its services on a case-by-case basis, pursuant to applicable legal standards and this plan, from among a limited number of cases.

The number of cases the agency head will consider is presently limited to fewer than two percent of cases that, absent a lapse in funding, are otherwise eligible for mediation. From among these cases, the agency head will provide mediation services only where it is determined that failure to offer mediation services poses an imminent threat to life or property.

The agency head estimates that, to provide these excepted services, the agency will need to retain employees in the job categories and full-time equivalents as follows as determined by a specific requirement (aside from the agency head, who will continue working) up to: two (2) employees in the Office of the Director; three (3) headquarters personnel; and eight (8) field operations personnel.

Orderly Shutdown Activities

In the event of a funding hiatus, the agency will proceed with the orderly shutdown of non-excepted activities beginning on the first day of the hiatus. The agency head will authorize only actions that will contribute to an orderly shutdown, with primary consideration given to protecting life and safeguarding government property and records.

The agency head estimates that the orderly shutdown of non-excepted operations will require not more than one-half workday. The agency head's intention is to accomplish shutdown in a way that will facilitate prompt reactivation when funds are made available:

1. The agency head will notify the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) immediately when shutdown activities are being initiated, by notice to the OMB Labor Branch Chief.

2. The agency head will limit obligations incurred to those needed to maintain the minimum level of essential activities necessary to protect life and property; to process necessary personnel actions; and to process the personnel payroll for all periods prior to fund interruption.
3. The agency head will notify agency senior managers of the hiatus and will direct them to begin shutdown activities.
4. The agency head will determine what specific services and personnel are essential and therefore excepted from suspension and, where applicable, the duration of each exception. The agency head will notify affected senior managers of the final determination.
5. The agency head will instruct the Director of Human Resources to take necessary personnel actions to notify employees of the suspension of agency operations and to release employees in accordance with law and OPM regulations, including the preparation of notices of furlough and processing of personnel and pay records in connection with furlough.
6. The Director of Human Resources will notify all employees that they should report for work as scheduled on the first workday of the hiatus. Managers or supervisors will inform employees of the status of funding and instruct them to limit their work activities to those functions necessary for the orderly cessation of operations. The Director of Human Resources will notify all employees that no work can be performed on a voluntary basis. The Director of Human Resources will also provide employees with electronic links to OPM guidance.
7. The Director of Human Resources will notify all employees of the impact of the furlough on all employee benefits, including unemployment compensation, health insurance, leave accrual, retirement, and life insurance, and will advise all employees to follow public news broadcasts and the OPM and/or OMB websites for notice of the end of the hiatus.
8. The manager of each office or division will notify absent employees of the furlough as soon as possible. Managers should contact employees in travel status and advise them to return to their duty station immediately.

Termination of Hiatus in Funding

OMB will notify the FMCS agency head when the hiatus of appropriations has ended, and when the agency head in turn can advise all senior managers. Each manager will contact employees that they supervise by phone or e-mail to inform them that the hiatus has ended and to advise them that employees are required to return to work on their next regular duty day.
